<td>The Instructional Designer will continue to research best practices for teaching online and incorporate those practices into training. In order to utilize additional multimedia tools effectively into online teaching, we propose additional staff (below).</td>
<td>Increased training opportunities and methods led to a growth in Blackboard use. With the addition of online versions of three existing workshops, including Introduction to Blackboard, training is more accessible to faculty (including adjuncts). The Distance Education Committee advocated the use of external workshops, such as @One, and provided financial incentives. Therefore, some training needs were completed outside of the college.</td> upgrade the server in a timely manner. However, to truly meet the training needs, additional staff support and a complete physical relocation (proximity to a training area) are needed.

There are several objectives/activities listed in the strategic plan, all of which were extensively addressed by the Distance Education Unit Plan as submitted by Jan Novak, so only those very specific to the ITC are noted here. Support necessary to accomplish those objectives will continue to be provided by the ITC support staff. We suspect that if there is an evaluation of DE services, it will be determined that in order to continue providing support at existing or improved levels, additional staff is needed.

In terms of supporting distance education, staffing requests submitted below will include additional technical support for Blackboard, as well as a 12-month staff member dedicated to student support. It is also proposed that the current 18-hour per week instructional assistant be converted to a full-time position. This revised position would include support for multimedia technologies, such as podcasting and other software to enhance distance education courses.

Blackboard Student Support has been increased to provide extended support during the first three weeks of the term and final’s week. This has worked well to manage the general traffic patterns of the semester. In addition, weekend online support was added for the entire term.

We’ve also added some on-campus orientations to Online Learning throughout the Spring 08 term. Presented by an faculty and ITC pair, these orientations provided a foundation for Blackboard and Online Learning.

Additionally, discussions are in progress for a 12-month staff person dedicated to Student Support for Blackboard to begin Fall 08.

The Instructional Assistant position (currently in the Hub) is still 18 hours per week. We would still like to have a full-time staff member dedicated to multimedia.
