2ND ANNUAL LAW & DEMOCRACY LECTURE & CAMPUS CAMP WELLSTONE

(by William Hanson and Sara Parker) On Thursday, September 13th, Chabot welcomed Alameda County Supervisor Richard Valle for the second annual Law and Democracy Lecture. His talk was titled, "Why Civic Engagement Matters: Reclaiming Lives and Sustainable Development." Supervisor Valle shared experiences from his own life that contributed to his interest in serving his community and encouraged Chabot students to be involved citizens.

The lecture was followed by a related event - a two-day training session run by the Wellstone Organization focused on teaching college students grassroots organizing skills. Thirty-five enthusiastic and dedicated Chabot students spent Friday and Saturday learning about topics like strategic planning, leadership development, and messaging. One participant wrote of the experience, "In life there are moments that are life-altering. This was one of those for me."

Thank you to the campus for your support, and we look forward to planning the 2013 Lecture and Camp Wellstone training.

Chabot College Theater tackles (yet another) local, political issue! Particulate Matter explores the building of the Power Plant in our community, and was written and directed by Theater Arts instructor, Rachel LePell. Faculty Emeritus Dr. Dennis Chowenhill, a Reed Buffington Award recipient, joins with Rachel LePell as Dramaturg.

A run starting Wednesday, November 7th with its first evening performance, join us in examining the lives of citizens as political strife invades their lives. The play combines poetic drama and realism, which mirrors the intersection between the public and private, representational and presentational forms.

The Reed L. Buffington Visual & Performing Arts Center will be the venue for the first performance starting at 8 p.m., followed with three additional evening performances November 8th, 9th, & 10th. Two matinee performances on Veteran’s Holiday weekend will start at 2 p.m., November 10th and 11th.

Tickets are $10 for students/staff/seniors, and $15/general admission. Limited seating so please arrive early.

The Particulate Matter company includes Robert Christopher, Johnna Murch, Terra “Taz” Balbuena, Victoria Haney, Erick Crawford, Jennifer Gresham, Jawaan Rubin, Gabe DeLeon, Jacob Barkely, Tatyana Jefferson, Will McDurmott, Brandon Wong, Nicholas Urbonas, Kristen Nicole James, Brandon Eckholm, Jose Rosales, Ryan Diggs, Youssef Riahi, and Taylor Hodges.

Synopsis- Josh, the play’s protagonist, is in the midst of two battles, one political, one private. He and his wife, Lily, are struggling to communicate, while he is busy fighting against the erection of a power plant in his community—he is a committed political activist. She, Lily, is a committed biologist, a Ph.D. candidate at the University in town. While engaged in this protest, becomes romantically and sexually distracted by an alluring cohort, Diane, as well as being under pressure by his aging mother to get a “real” job. Meanwhile, tension rises between “old school” and “new school” activist strategies; Joella wants to pound the pavement, while Luke insists on new technology and incorporating the folks from the Occupy movement.

The play combines poetic drama and realism, which mirrors the intersection between the public and private, representational and presentational forms.
