MEDIA INTERNSHIP
Are you a linguistically inspired student-type with a penchant for visual arts? Maybe you’re looking to bolster your resume? Perhaps you want to work with a social services nonprofit with history (rather than a flash in the pan)?

WELL--
You’ll definitely want this part-time internship with Volunteers of America NCNN Bay Area’s development team.

This marketing position will provide you with the unique experience of finding compromises between a local office’s outreach needs and national brand requirements. Here’s the kicker--the populations we serve aren’t often in the public eye. Foster youth, income-challenged seniors, men re-entering society after serving prison sentences; they are a part of our community and their stories need telling too.

We’re looking for someone who:
- Is a student-type looking for volunteer experience in a structured environment
- Loves words (writing), images (photography), and combining them to creatively tell stories
- Is insistent nature when it comes to getting projects done
- Has an interest in nonprofit work and/or social services

What you’ll be doing:
- Collecting stories from our clients, staff, donors, and/or events for use in--
  - Our monthly newsletter
  - Occasional blog posts
- Maintaining our social media presence; keeping an eye on our audience for further development efforts
- Using Google Drive like there’s no tomorrow
- Strategizing with the Development Director on increasing the Bay Area presence within the community.

This unpaid position requires 10-12 hour of work per week and is telecommute friendly (much of the position can be performed on a computer). We ask that applicants live in Alameda County or Contra Costa County and have access to transportation. Please be able to make a 6 month minimum commitment--we can discuss summer plans.
